TENNESSEE CENTRAL

Establishes Improved Service—
Direct Connection With This City.

The Tennessee Central change of schedule of trains, which were announced a few days ago, will have the effect of materially bettering the passenger service of the road by giving it closer connection with Illinois Central trains to points in Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, and Tennessee. The changes in schedule were effective Sunday.

The road inaugurates through passenger service, in connection with the Illinois Central to Louisville, Evansville, Paducah, Memphis and all points. This service is the beginning of the installation of a first class passenger service to all the principal Western points.

Double passenger service, daily, is inaugurated on the Western division. Train No. 10, the Paducah express, leaves Nashville at 8:30 a. m., and reaches Clarksville at 10:45 o'clock; it arrives at Hopkinsville at 12:01 p. m., where it makes close connections with the Illinois Central for Paducah, Evansville, Louisville, Marion and intermediate points. Returning, this train leaves Hopkinsville at 4 p. m., arriving at Clarksville at 5:15 p. m. and Nashville 7:30 p. m. The incoming Illinois Central train connects with this train at Hopkinsville.

The other western division train established Sunday is No. 12, the Clarksville and Hopkinsville local. It leaves Nashville at 5:15 p. m., Clarksville at 7:30, and reaches Hopkinsville at 8:45 o'clock. It leaves Hopkinsville returning at 7 a. m., reaching Clarksville at 8:15 a. m., and Nashville at 10:30 a. m.

Killed His Son.

W. W. Armer assaulted his son at Sacramento, Ky., with a wagon brake from the results of which the boy died next day. He had left his father's home and was working for other parties, when the father went for him and tried to persuade him to go home; failing in this he lost his temper and attacked him with results as stated above.

Elder Armer was formerly a Methodist minister from Illinois and later a Cumberland Presbyterian minister, and still later was refused license to preach.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

N. E. Calmes, former editor of the News-Democrat of Sturgis, and family had a narrow escape from death in a runaway last Friday night. They were being driven home by B. W. Dyer, when his team became unmanageable and runaway. Fortunately none of them were seriously hurt, but Mr. Calmes was bruised and scratched up considerably.

The Boatner-Schlitzbaum Case.

At Hartford, last Monday, J. W. Boatner was put on trial on indictment for receiving stolen money.

This is the famous Boatner-Schlitzbaum case in which collusion to rob the American Express company was charged. Boatner claimed to send $2,800 in a package from Owensboro to Fordville. The package and Boatner went to Fordville on same train. He was seen talking to Schlitzbaum, the agent at Fordville, soon afterwards Schlitzbaum was robbed. He and Boatner were arrested next day and after a trial Schlitzbaum was sent to the penitentiary at Eddyville for one year for embezzling the funds of the I. C. R. R.

Boatner claims that his father gave him the money in California, five miles from the tracks of the Southern Pacific railroad. He said the money was given to him by his father in the presence of his mother. It was wrapped in a white handkerchief. His father won the money on a California race track. He afterwards killed a man and was forced to leave for South America. He instructed his son to purchase mineral lands. Boatner is now in jail at Hartford.

THE WEEKS SCALE.

The Weeks Combination Triple Beam Scale has been before the public for a period of thirty years and is used in almost every city and town from coast to coast. Some competitors during all these thirty years have endeavored, by misrepresenting facts, to injure others in the same business, but, in most instances, the injury has only reacted upon themselves. The Weeks Co. have never made a practice of these underhanded methods, believing in the "live and let live" policy, and their constantly increasing trade testifies to their good business methods, and the real merits of their up-to-date scales.

This Company make a weighing machine which is built with a special view to accuracy and durability. There is none more accurately and durably made, and the thousands of satisfied customers will testify to this fact. The Weeks Scale is KNOWN to be reliable in every respect, and the public know its worth. Many of them are used in Kentucky, and are giving the highest satisfaction. The Weeks Scale Co.

HIS OPINION.

Two men were disputing over their respective churches. Finally one of them called a neighbor who was passing by and asked his opinion as to which was the only church in which to be saved:

"Well neighbors," said he, "I've been handling wheat to mill for 30 years. Now there's two roads lead to the mill. One's the valley road, the other takes over the hill; and never yet friends has the miller criticised the road I took, but just asks, 'Is your wheat good?'" —Gallatin Rep.

On Wm P. Terry's land, adjoining the Witherspoon survey, Col. Fred Robertson has opened a fine spar mine. He has sunk a shaft 73 feet deep and is taking out some fine examples of fluor spar. The vein is five feet wide and already they are hauling to this market, several tons being delivered last week.

Our New Salem correspondent sends the following:

There has been thousands of feet of lumber passed down this week going to the big mill being erected at the Cullen mine.

The big whistle at the Nancy Hanks is heard three times every day.

Work has been resumed at the Stevens fire clay mines, with a full force of hands.

The Sheridan country, in its actual development work, is pressing to the front. On all sides are evidences of thrift. Shafts are being sunk and for this alone hundreds and thousands of feet of lumber is being used. It is progressing much more rapidly than many of us realize who have not been on the ground. Many who had early opportunities may wish they had been on the ground floor.

Eloped to Get Married.

On Wednesday of last week Mr. Eb Guess and Miss Minnie Driver, the fifteen-year-old daughter of H. S. Driver, eloped to Elizabethtown, Ill., and were united in marriage. They were accompanied by Mr. Rufus Ehler and Miss Carrie Hughes.

Mr. Driver opposed his daughter's marriage to Mr. Guess, but love laughs at locksmiths and irate parents, so the young lovers, failing to gain parental consent, resolved to elope.

With this most desirable and in view Miss Minnie, with the consent of her unsuspecting parents, went Tuesday evening to spend the night at the home of her friend, Miss Carrie. There during the darkness of night Eb and Rufus also made their appearance and found the girls in readiness for the journey. Getting into a carriage, the four drove off at a rapid rate of speed toward the river, conversing in whispers and scarcely daring to breathe, lest the "old man" should overtake them with his shotgun and compel them to return.

No such calamity befel them, however. They reached Elizabethtown in safety and after procuring the necessary paper, they found an obliging justice of the peace, who happily united the couple in wedlock.

They then returned to the home of the bridegroom in this county.

An inquest was held over the body, and Dr. G. C. Moreland of Fords Ferry was summoned. He gave it as his opinion that liquor was the prime cause of the man's death, and that the blow of itself was insufficient to kill him. The verdict of the jury sustained this opinion. WOMAN'S WORLD

MRS. ANTOINETTE FUNK.

A Professional Woman Who Advises Women to Remain Domestic.

Mrs. Antoinette Funk is one of the cleverest women lawyers in Illinois. Mrs. Funk really grew up in the law office and the courtroom. Her father practiced law at Dwight, Ill., and when he died she went to live with her uncle, C. C. Strong, at Pontiac. In her uncle's law office she began her studies simply because she was fascinated with the business and not because she ever expected to enter the profession. In time she was married. After her two daughters were born she moved to Bloomington and there resumed her studies in the Illinois Wesleyan university. Before she finished her course she decided to take up the practice of law as soon as she could be admitted to the bar. Five years ago she was admitted to practice and since then has continually followed the profession.

For a professional woman Mrs. Funk has some extraordinary opinions about women in the professions. She does not believe in it. She is herself a lawyer by accident and not by design, and she deprecates the fact that women ever chose to enter public or semipublic life. She takes great interest in her work, but she says any woman is out of place in any of the professions.

"A woman is better off with a few babies at home than in a law office," says Mrs. Funk. "Women's place is in the home, as it has always been. No change in social or economic conditions can alter that. The woman who enters a profession and assumes the duties and the hardships of public life gets out of her natural environment. The continual and increasing drift of women toward public action is working an ill effect upon society, and the ill will grow greater as the proportion of professional women increases."

"I have two young daughters. Both of them were born before I took up the practice of law. I shall do everything in my power to turn those girls from the thought of entering any profession. I shall teach them all the domestic arts so far as I can, for that is what they should know."

"The professions rob women of their domestic tastes. It cannot be denied that women lose interest in her home duties the instant she begins her public work. Housework, which the old-fashioned woman delighted in, has come to be scorned by the great majority of the well-to-do women. Of old it mattered not how much money a woman had at her command she did at least a considerable part of her own work. The same condition should exist today, but it does not. The only semblance of it left is fast disappearing under the influence of new tastes required by women."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Be Careful How You Sit.

In sitting women are guilty of a number of sins of awkwardness. The stout woman, for example, invariably sits squarely, with feet planted about twelve inches apart and her toes turned out.

The lean, long-legged woman on the other hand, winds her feet under the legs of her chair or she crosses her legs and thrusts her feet out in front of her.

Now, the stout woman should "pull" herself and sit very erect. The lean woman should choose the highest possible seat and plant her feet on it, on the ground that the feet are elevated two or three inches.

The seat, if possible, should have some peculiar tilting. So, rather than with her small feet dangling in a helpless way or perches her feet on the edge of a high seat, with the feet on a seat and the feet on the ground and the feet on the ground, she should sit on the seat, with the feet on the ground, and the feet on the ground.

The seat should be the lowest chair in the room and sink gracefully into it. But the greatest offender against this physical art is the manly girl. Her very attempt to assume man's ease and freedom is the cause of her downfall. Her exaggerated attitudes indeed become absurd mimicry.

Beautifying a Door.

In a room recently seen tapestry was utilized in a most attractive way. The owner of the room explained that the doors of an otherwise promising apartment which she wished to convert into a library were of cheap wood with an ugly finish and hopelessly spoiled every decorative scheme that was tried. In this dilemma an artist friend suggested covering them with tapestry, which was done. The material is the good upholstery variety, to be had almost anywhere in satisfactory reproductions of antique designs. This was put on the doors to cover them entirely and evenly. Small invisible tacks were used, and afterward a narrow cord bead of so dull a shade that it was almost invisible was put on over the tacks. The cordings were stained in a dark tint corresponding to the background of the tapestry, and outside of them, flat on the wall, was placed entirely around each door frame, from the floor at one side to the floor at the other, a band of the tapestry about six inches wide.—Lodge Talk.

Lighting the House.

In the lighting of houses plenty of light judiciously shaded is what best suits the majority. The idea in artificial lighting is to suggest the brightness and warmth of sunlight within the house walls. The only real sunlight color being pale yellow, this should be used largely. It is far more comfortable and more economical to have the light down low, surrounding and warming the occupants of the room, than to have it shining out cold and chill from a distance. The wax candle is untidy, and its light is not particularly good for reading purposes, but for general purposes there is no purer or softer light. Many women prefer to have their drawing rooms underlighted.

To Clean Brasses Brasses.

Many of our flower-pots and vases in the fashionable "tenacious brass work" will soon lose their luster, and readers may be glad to know that they can be kept bright by the following method of cleaning: The skins of lemons that have been used for culinary purposes may be utilized by turning them inside out and dipping them in silver sand. Apply these scourers to the cut brass, but never to a polished brass surface, and rub and polish afterward with a soft cloth. If lemons are not handy, powder some bath brick in a saucer, pour over it some vinegar and apply this with a piece of coarse flannel to the cut brass surface and polish with a soft duster.

The Kitchen Apron.

For the woman who must go into her own kitchen, even in afternoon dress, there is an apron to be had that will protect the daintiest gown from contact with pots and pans. It is made of heavy gingham in Mother Hubbard shape, the neck being cut out square and buttoned behind, reaching to the floor, where it is finished by a ruffle that makes it stand out from the gown to catch the drops that might fall. To go with these aprons are sleeves of the same material that cover the bottom of the dress sleeves, and then, too, there is a cap to cover the hair.

A Woman's Enterprise.

I obtained the use of one window in a grocery store, where I displayed for sale each Saturday afternoon such home-cooked delicacies as would serve ideally for Sunday dinner or luncheon. Bread, cakes, salads, desserts, cold meats, etc., were prepared on Friday afternoon or Saturday morning. I planned a different variety each week. In addition to this I filled small orders during the week and have made on an average about $5 a week for two years, or nearly $500 in all.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Baby's Gums.

Inflamed gums caused by teething are quickly relieved if a little lemon juice is rubbed on. Dip your finger in the lemon and then rub it on baby's gums. There will probably be an increase of crying at first, but relief will soon follow. If the skin is stretched tightly over the tooth and the gum hard and swollen it probably needs lancing. The first sign of coming teeth is an increased flow of saliva—dribbling, as it is usually called.

Warming Dishes.

The practice of putting dishes in the oven to warm them for the table is a bad one. The dry heat causes the enamel to crack in time, and then the grease soon penetrates them to their utter ruin. Put the dishes to be heated in a dishpan and pour boiling water over them. Let them stand and steam until ready to serve the meal, then wipe with a clean, dry towel.

The Dominant Sex.

No matter what may be the cause of the prominence now given to the fads and fallibilities of womanhood, there can be no gainsaying that at the present moment woman is the dominant sex, and we begin to wonder how she ever came to be called the "weaker."—London Court Journal.

Be Young as You Can.

Let no old woman be afraid of one who will say, "Why, she goes about like a young girl!" If you feel light and easy in motion, even if you are old, why be staid, mooping, artificial, because you are supposed to be so, being no longer young?

A Berlin woman's club, of which Frau Gauer is the leader, has a membership of 5,000, all working women. The organization publishes a paper and finds situations for the unemployed.

Whenever a woman's house shall be her palace, her pride, her delight, she will not be the victim of ennui or vanity or discontent.

YOUR KIDNEYS ARE THEY WELL?

Unless they are, good health is impossible.

Every drop of blood in the body passes through and is filtered by healthy kidneys every three minutes. Sound kidneys strain out the impurities from the blood, diseased kidneys do not, hence you are sick. FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE makes the kidneys well so they will eliminate the poisons from the blood. It removes the cause of the many diseases resulting from disordered kidneys which have allowed your whole system to become poisoned.

Rheumatism, Bad Blood, Gout, Gravel, Dropsy, Inflammation of the Bladder, Diabetes and Bright's Disease, and many others, are all due to disordered kidneys. A simple test for Kidney disease is to set aside your urine in a bottle or glass for twenty-four hours. If there is a sediment or a cloudy appearance, it indicates that your kidneys are diseased, and unless something is done they become more and more affected until Bright's Disease or Diabetes develops.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE is the only preparation which will positively cure all forms of Kidney and Bladder troubles, and cure you permanently. It is a safe remedy and certain in results.

If You are a sufferer, take FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE at once. It will make you well.

Some Pronounced Incurable

Mr. G. A. Stillson, a merchant of Tampico, Ill., writes: "FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE is meeting with wonderful success. It has cured some cases here that physicians pronounced incurable. I myself am able to testify to its merits. My face today is a living picture of health and FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE has made it such."

Had Lumbago and Kidney Trouble

Edward Huss, a well known business man of Salisbury, Mo., writes: "I wish to say for the benefit of others, that I was a sufferer from lumbago and kidney trouble, and all the remedies I took gave me no relief. I began to take FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE, and after the use of three bottles I am cured."

KITCHEN CONVENIENCES.

A Compact Cabinet That Saves Many Steps When Cooking.

The simple homelike kitchen cabinet devised by a reader of the Tribune Farmer and here illustrated has compartments for flour, sugar, mixing bowl and baking tin, with a sliding pile or bread board at convenient height, and above this shelves for

HANDY KITCHEN CABINET.

Spices, baking powders and the various ingredients used in cooking. Another useful addition where one has a small room to work in would be a hinged table, which may be dropped when not in use. And still more convenient is the small table fitted with casters, which may be easily rolled from one place to another. With a light, high stool in the kitchen, dish washing, looking over fruit, preparing vegetables and even ironing may be done sitting down instead of standing, thus relieving the aching back and tired feet.

Tissue Paper and Hangers.

There is no better way of keeping sleeves, especially those sleeves of thin fabrics, in good condition than by stuffing them with tissue paper. If this paper is placed beneath the sleeves it gives an added freshness and avoids the drooping that so often follows a day's wearing. A good way of keeping a walking skirt in shape is to see that it is always carefully hung by two loops. The venture will be much better kept if the hangers can be arranged for a skirt that has either wide or narrow width in the front. Care is taken by the well-groomed woman that her coats, especially her walking coats, are placed on hangers. Silk petticoats, keep their crispness much longer if they are hung upside down. When hung in this way the loops are placed among the folds and made so small as to be invisible when the skirt is worn.

Cleaning Hints.

The Cooking Club gives some good cleaning methods. A tablespoonful of vinegar mixed with three of pure linseed oil will freshen and polish mahogany. Alcohol cleans piano keys; kerosene, oilcloth table and shelf covers. For sponging out bureau drawers or sideboards use tepid water containing a small quantity of thymol. To clean a clock lay in the bottom a rag saturated with kerosene. The fumes loosen the dirt and cause it to drop out. In a few days place another cloth saturated in kerosene in the clock. The fumes lubricate the works.

A Woman Press Agent.

Miss Ida McGlone Gibson is a very successful theatrical press agent, whose home is in New York. Her services are retained by a well known company, and, besides securing newspaper notices, she is called upon to arrange matters of transportation, the billing of towns, etc. Miss Gibson says that she would advise any woman to take up the work who possesses good health, executive ability and newspaper training.

THE PROPOSAL.

He thought that he would woo her as a lyric poet might.

Enthusiasm about her sapphire eyes, and her like sunshine bright, And now he thought of her by day and dreamed of her by night.

The medieval style he mused may be the best, perchance—

He'd tell his lovely lady fair that he was a loving plume.

Against all other rival knights he'd fearless break his lance.

Perhaps a simpler way were best:

"Sweet maid this earthly life is but a hard and stormy path with clouds and shadows rife.

My strong arm would protect you, dear, I swear, my love be true."

But this is what he really said, in very husky tones.

While sweatdrops on his forehead stood and trembling were his tones.

"Dear Kate—er Miss Kate—er I meant I ought to say Miss Jones."

"I've got married—er—I mean, his voice was none too clear,

"I'm earning—er—fifteen a week, it's not enough, I fear."

The maiden blushed and murmured low, "let's try it, Willie, dear."

Greatest Ocean Depths.

The deepest sounding ever made by any vessel was by the U. S. ship Nero, while on the Honolulu and Manila cable survey, and with cable borrowed from the Albatross. When near Guam the Nero got a 2,900 fathoms, or 31,500 ft., only 65 feet less than six miles. If Mount Everest, the highest mountain on earth, were set down in this hole, it would have above its summit a depth of 2,612 feet, or nearly half a mile of water.—National Geographic Magazine.

Even the committee will not know what the lucky number is.

Two will choose 12 numbers, place them in a cigar box, slak them well, place them on a table, blindfold the third man who is holding an envelope. They lead him to the box, then the other two will take their seats in the rear of the room. The man who wears the hood-wink will raise the lid, draw one of the 12 tickets, placing it in the envelope and sealing it. He will then close the lid to the box, remove the hood-wink, take the box and remaining tickets and place them in the fire, burn them up. One thousand tickets will be placed in envelopes same as lucky number and placed in shoe case. Customers will draw one envelope from the case, place his name on envelope and drop in ballot box, keys to to which are held by the committee, which will be opened on closing day of contest by the committee. The one holding same number as held by committee gets the suite free. Not a living soul will know what the lucky number is until close of contest and opened by the committee, who will take and carefully examined customers' numbers. All who ship or send their wool shall get a draw.

THROWS CHILD IN RIVER.

Des Moines, Ia., May 20.—Swinning her three year old baby girl about her head so as to give to the body the greatest momentum, Mrs. Trussler, a demented woman from St. Paul, today threw her offspring from the bridge into the muddy waters of the Des Moines river. Then deliberating until the water had closed over the little form she climbed upon the railing stood poised for a moment and leaped close to the spot where her child had gone down. A riverman saw the act, rowed to the scene, and was able to rescue both. The child may die.

Sour Stomach

No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, general debility, sour risings, and catarrh of the stomach are all due to indigestion. Kodol cures indigestion. This new discovery represents the natural juices of digestion as they exist in a healthy stomach, combined with the greatest known tonic and reconstructive properties. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does not only cure indigestion and dyspepsia, but this famous remedy cures all stomach troubles by cleansing, purifying, sweetening and strengthening the mucous membranes lining the stomach.

Mr. S. S. Ball, of Ravenswood, W. Va., says: "I was troubled with sour stomach for twenty years. Kodol cured me and I am now taking it in milk for baby."

DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

For Congress,
OLLIE M. JAMES.

Congressman Ollie M. James left here last week for Webster City, Iowa, where he was called to the bedside of his brother-in-law, Prof. L. H. Ford, Principal of the high school of Webster City, who lies in an unconscious condition from the effects of an assault made upon him by a man who took him unawares and struck him a violent blow on the back of the head with a hammer or some similar deadly instrument. The blow may prove fatal. The man who assaulted Prof. Ford is supposed to have become offended because the Professor corrected one of his sons at school.

The Southern Baptist Convention met at Nashville, Tenn., on Friday of last week in the "Sun Jones Tabernacle." The sessions were largely attended. The seating capacity of the church, 6,000, was taxed all the time, and it is estimated that over 100,000 people attended. Its deliberations extended over 14 days. Delegates were present from 17 States. Saturday, the closing day, a voluntary subscription was asked for the Southern Theological Seminary at Louisville, when the handsome sum of $53,325.50 was raised. The Convention adjourned Monday night. Elder W. R. Gibbs was Kentucky state delegate and Rev. E. B. Blackburn was associate delegate.

Judge Allie W. Young in an interview given out at Cincinnati, Ohio, denies that he will again be a candidate for chairman of the state committee to succeed himself.

Mr. Young denied that he was a part of the Hearst organization in Kentucky, and said he had no choice for presidential nominee.

He declared that the published statements concerning his intention to be factional in recognizing contesting delegations to the state convention to be entirely false. He refused to forecast the action of the convention.

A prize of a $25 library has been awarded by the county board of education of Hall county, Texas, to Air Line school, in Glade district, for making the best improvements during the past year upon its school building. The same prize will be offered for the next year.

This is a fine idea and one well worth adopting. Most of our country school houses could be improved, and this would encourage it.

The will of Mrs. Victoria Jackson, filed at Bowling Green, Ky., establishes a Cumberland Presbyterian orphan asylum there, leaving a home and a large endowment for it.

Aim at perfection in everything you undertake, and persevere and you will come much nearer to it than those who by their despondency and laziness give it up as unattainable.

Cumberland Presbyterians at Dallas, Tex., are discussing unity with the Northern church. A majority of the delegates favor the idea.

At the produce house they also broke into the money drawer, getting about 100 pennies. A box of postage stamps remained undisturbed. Sunday morning the City Marshal of Morgentfield was telephoned for and he came with his blood hounds, but the dogs failed to find a trail of the burglars. A number of other burglaries have occurred here recently, but so far the city authorities have been unable to find any clue that would lead to the arrest and punishment of the guilty party or parties.

HINTS FOR FARMERS

The Farmer Has the Best of It.

Many farmers have had a dull and hard winter. The fearful cold has prevented them from doing their usual work and has made the season lonely and disagreeable. They would not complain if they could know how workmen in town and city have been doing. If a farmer cannot work as he would like he at least has his home, and if he has been thrifty there are fuel and food on hand. When the town workman loses his job his cash expenses still go on, and he must eat into his little savings. The past winter has been tough on the mechanic. He has lost many days at his trade, and his income has been cut down. The cost of the kind rent has been high, and there has been little left for food and clothing. If a farmer who thinks his life is lonely and hard had come to the city and seen how workmen were living he would have been very thankful that he had a farm to go back to. If we hunt for them we can find things about farm life that are not just what we would like, but if we could see city life as we see our own we would be very slow to change. Rural New-Yorker.

Keeping Black Horses Black.

It is a little trouble to keep a black horse black, but it can be done, remarks a writer in Michigan Farmer. Never allow a horse to stand in the sun for any length of time, especially if he is black, as he fades too easily. Five minutes in the hot sun when the horse is wet with sweat is sufficient to start the color. At any time a black horse will fade if allowed to stand so the sun's rays get fixed on that powerful heat puller, his black coat. I drive a black team that is as black in July as in January, and the one team does the work on an eight acre farm, with the occasional help of the driver, as in haying. My plan is to have a few shade trees scattered around the field. Along the fences they take up little room and grow where we usually stop. It takes only a little extra time to place the horses in the shade when standing and saves their color, which is worth as much for a farmer to look at as it is to any other class of people. And if it is a horse you wish to sell his looks will enable you to sell him for enough more to more than pay for the extra trouble.

Co-operative Elevators.

Co-operative farmers' elevators in the grain producing states, wisely planned and conducted under good business environment, are an unquestioned success, not always, but with enough frequency to warrant the assertion. The movement has grown until a considerable number are in successful operation in the central west, blunting at what might be accomplished in Michigan, Ohio, etc. Farther west, in Illinois and Iowa, where some signal successes have been recorded, the average gain of well conducted farmers' elevators is regarded sufficient to warrant further wise extension of the general plan, which has long since passed the experimental stage. But it does not mean unwisely rushing into a proposition of this character any more than in the case of farmers contemplating the establishment of a cannery plant or similar co-operative enterprise. In all cases the situation must be thoroughly canvassed and the wisest judgment and management used in attaining success. American Agriculturist.

Bordeaux Mixture.

Material for this standard preparation should be kept on hand by every orchardist or gardener. Its composition is as follows:

Copper distillate, five pounds; quicklime, five pounds; water, forty-five gallons.

Dissolve the copper distillate in a barrel containing ten or twelve gallons of water. Shake the quicklime and thin it to a creamy whitewash. Pour the whitewash very slowly through a wire screen into the copper solution. Stir the mixture thoroughly and add enough water to make forty-five gallons in all. Stir occasionally while applying as a spray to the trees.

In the preparation of the Bordeaux mixture it is necessary that the ingredients should be mixed in a wooden vessel. If an iron one is used the copper will go to the iron, and the effect of the spray is largely neutralized. Apply the wash cold and as soon after it is prepared as possible. Never allow it to stand overnight.

As Spring Wheat.

Macaroni wheat is by nature a spring wheat. This fact is important in view of the general wheat situation of the southwest at this time. Much fall grown wheat has been destroyed by dry weather. Planted late in the fall a large portion came up partially and died down in the face of dry weather. Much of this land is still in good condition for wheat. Think on the price of May wheat and arrange to plant a sure crop when by seeding some land to the hard wheats now available. Dallas Farm and Ranch.

Time For Small Fruits.

Experiments have shown that by the use of nitrate of soda greater yields of Piny and White Litch currants are produced than with sulphate of ammonia. Litching is extremely helpful to each of these varieties. In raspberry growing lime has proved beneficial when used in connection with both sulphate of ammonia and nitrate of soda. The best results followed where it was used in connection with sulphate of ammonia.

Nitrate of Soda For Small Grains.

At the New Jersey experiment station a top dressing of nitrate of soda at the rate of 150 pounds per acre sowed broadcast about April 1 increased the yield of wheat, rye and millet and Wages in the United States on the average are more than twice those in Belgium, three times those of Denmark, France, Germany, Italy and Spain and one and a half those in England and Scotland.

Wages in Russian factories are 2 cents an hour and upward. There are thousands who work for a cent an hour and tens of thousands who do not receive 30 cents a day for ten, eleven and more hours' work.

Cash registers are all but universal in stores in Glasgow. Modern office furniture and office appliances are superseding the older styles. Even official correspondence is beginning to yield to the omnipresent typewriter.

The Frankfurt (Germany) city council has just received permission to make a $6,425,000 bond issue. The rate of interest will be between 3 and 4 per cent. This money will be spent in making municipal improvements, a large part of which will be expended upon public buildings.

The grave of the German poet Heine, in the Montmartre cemetery, Paris, is said to be visited by more persons than Zola's, which is quite near it. It is customary for visitors to leave their cards. Of 255 cards found on Heine's grave thirty were left by English and American visitors and over 250 by Germans and Austrians.

All the region of the upper Amazon and its tributaries offers magnificent facilities for cattle ranching. When the higher lands are reached there are vast stretches of prairie, or "savannas," as they are called, with a climate like spring all the year, where cattle enough to supply a continent can be raised, practically without expense.

Expert estimates of the probable manufacture of automobiles in several states of the Union in 1904 give the principal place to Michigan, with Ohio second. Even Massachusetts and Wisconsin surpass New York in the list, while Illinois makes an extremely poor showing. Detroit and Cleveland are the two cities which surpass all others in this republic as centers of the production of the self-motors. It seems odd that New York and Chicago should lag behind them so far.

The $1,235,000 asked by the secretary of the navy for gun practice during the year seems enormous until one considers the cost of firing the big guns now in use. To fire a thirteen inch gun costs for powder and shell about $500. Four times a year the men are exercised in big gun practice with irregular charges, each man of the gun's crew firing four shots in these trials.

There are seven men in the gun's crew on these guns. To fire a four inch gun costs $175 for powder and shell, and a one pounder $250.

FEARED HER HUSBAND.

Hodgenville, Ky., May 20.—Fearing bodily harm from an irate husband, Mrs. Lettie Skaggs, of Green county, bedridden with fever, crawled from her couch, and getting a shotgun leveled at her, the foot of the bed and pulled the trigger, the contents taking effect in the right side of Wallace Seaggs as he entered the door of their home last night about 10:30 o'clock. Too weak to notify their neighbors of the tragedy, the woman crawled back into bed and remained there alone until morning, with the corpse of her husband lying where it fell.

At the coroner's inquest it developed that Seaggs came to his death from a shotgun wound at the hands of his wife. Frequent quarrels had taken place between the husband and wife of late, and which finally resulted in the tragedy.

Weak lungs should be careful. Coughs and colds are dangerous then. The Minute Cough Cure cures coughs and colds and gives strength to the lungs. Mrs. E. E. Fenner, of Marion, Ind., says: "I suffered with a cough until I ran down in weight from 118 to 92 lbs. I tried a number of remedies to no avail until I used One Minute Cough Cure. Four bottles of this wonderful remedy cured me entirely of the cough, strengthened my lungs and restored me to my normal weight, health and strength. Sold by all druggists."

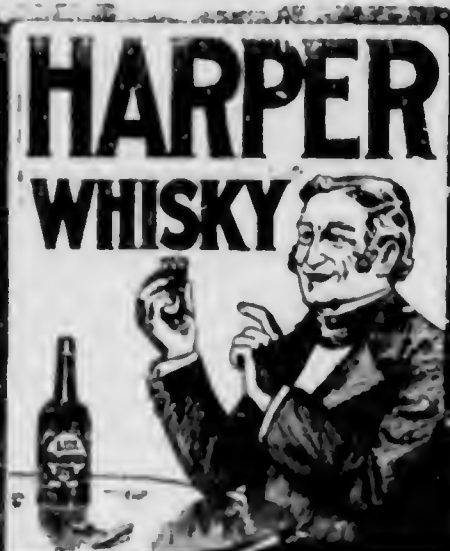

MISHAPS.

A mercantile company posted a large poster on a bridge. The wind caused it to flutter and scare a team. The team tipped the wagon over and broke two dozen eggs, a hame strap, the driver's leg and an axletree. They ran away and through a garden, tipping a beehive over. The bees stung a young lady of the house until her lips swelled to such immense proportions that her best fellow left her and went to the Philippines. The driver sued the firm for damages. One hundred and eighty witnesses were called. When they were asked what was advertised on the poster not one could tell. LET IT GO.

If you have had an unfortunate experience this year, forget it. If you have made a failure in your speech, your song, your book, or your article; if you have been placed in an embarrassing position; if you have fallen and hurt yourself, by a false slip, or if you have been shamed and abused do not dwell upon it, forget it. There is not a single redeeming feature in these memories, and the presence of their ghosts will rob you of many a happy hour. There is nothing valuable in them. Wipe them out of your mind forever. Drop them.

If you have been indiscreet or imprudent, if you have been talked about, or if your reputation has been injured so that you fear you can never outgrow or redeem it, do not drag the hideous shadows of the rattling skeleton about with you. Rub them from the slate of memory; wipe the out. Forget them; start with a clean slate and spend your energies in keeping it clean for the future.

Resolve that, whatever you do or do not do, you will not be haunted by skeletons nor cherish shadows. They must get out and give place to the sunshine. Determine that you will have nothing to do with discords, but that every one of them must get out of your mind. No matter how formidable or persistent; wipe them out. Forget them; have nothing to do with them; do not let the little enemies, worryings and forebodings, anxiety and regrets, sap your energy, for this is your success and happiness capital.

A gloomy face, a sour expression, a worrying mind, or a fretting disposition is a proof of an absence of self control. It is an earmark of your weakness, a confession of inability to cope with your environment. Drive it away, dominate yourself.

Dismiss from your mind a nagging suggestion that has to do with illness. If you have had an operation, it is over; let it glide into the shadows, the background of memory; do not dwell upon it, do not think upon it.

A despondent young writer remarked that while he was in the west he used to watch the cows on the prairies, and could not help envying them. "I used often to heave a sigh and wish I were a cow." What keeps them so content? he asked a farmer. "Oh, they are enjoying themselves, and chewing their ends," replied the farmer.

The trouble with many of us is that we do not relish chewing our ends—letting go of our wishes, pains, and anxieties and just enjoying ourselves. We cannot bear to let them go; we cling to them like a thrifty housewife, who can not bear to throw away a rag or a scrap of anything but piles useless rubbish in the attic. We can not bear to let our enemies go; we can not seem to kick out of doors the things that worry, and fret, and chafe, and you never do us a particle of good.

We Americans keep our mind-closetense and our nerves up to such a pitch that it is the hardest thing in the world for us to drop things. We chafe and fret instead of just resting without being haunted by the skeletons of care, of anxiety and of business.

Who can estimate the medicinal power of one cheerful life in the home of one serene, balanced soul?

The workman who rejoices in his work and laughs away his discomfort is the man who is sure to rise, for it is what we do easily and what we like to do that we do well.

The most of us make our backs ache carrying useless, foolish burdens. We carry luggage and rubbish that are of no earthly use, but which sap our strength and keep us jaded and tired to no purpose. If we could only learn to hold on to the things worth while and drop the rubbish, letting go the useless, the foolish, the silly, the hamperers add the things that hinder, we should not only make progress, but we should also keep happier, brighter and more harmonious.

A Cure For Piles.

"I had a bad case of piles," says F. Carter, of Atlanta, Ga., "and consulted a physician who advised me to try a box of DeWitt's White Hazel Salve. I purchased a box and was entirely cured. It is splendid for piles, giving relief instantly, and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers." DeWitt's White Hazel Salve is unequalled for its healing qualities. Shoquabam, Wash., May 20.—Mrs. A. J. Barlow, wife of a section foreman at Shoquabam, saved the life of C. J. Ingraham, a telegraph operator who was shot by a bandit, and then telegraphed the alarm to headquarters, resulting in the capture of the guilty outlaw.

Ingraham was shot twice in his office by a robber, who then looted the place. Mrs. Barlow heard the shots and found Ingraham lying on the floor, desperately wounded.

In response to her telegram in the train dispatcher a special train was sent for Ingraham, whose wounds she meanwhile had dressed. He was taken to the hospital while a detail of cavalry men captured the robber.

WASHINGTON LETTER

(Special Correspondence.)

Representative Gibson of Tennessee was in the commissary department of the Union army during the civil war. In December, 1863, he was ordered from Washington to a point on the eastern shore of Maryland. It was a desperate cold. There was no way of getting there except by wagon, and Gibson took an ambulance and two mules and started to drive. It took him two days to get there. When he arrived his mules were in such bad condition that they died. Gibson was court-martialed by order of General Birney, who was in command in that department, on the charge of over-driving the mules, and it was with great difficulty that he cleared himself.

A short time ago Representative Gibson made a speech at an entertainment at one of the Lutheran churches in Washington. After he had concluded an aged, gray-headed man approached him and said:

"Gibson, I still maintain you over-drove those mules."

The gray-headed man was General Birney, whom Gibson had not seen since the court martial episode of 1863.

Looking For Walker.

Hon. Admiral John G. Walker devotes more time to canal matters than to fashion plates, and could hardly be called spick and span in the civilian clothes he wears at his work. A stranger would be far more likely to take Admiral Walker for a countryman than a retired navy officer. His long whiskers are of the type so popular in rural dramas, and his rolling walk might well be taken for the movement acquired by following a plow.

A brusque young man in search of the canal commission encountered Admiral Walker in a corridor of the Corcoran building and asked politely:

"Can you tell me where I will find Walker?"

"Yes," Admiral Walker replied. "Just come with me."

The dapper young fellow followed Admiral Walker into his office. The admiral took a seat behind his desk and invited the young man to sit down.

"Well, what can I do for you?" Admiral Walker asked of the young man, who began to squirm uneasily in his chair.

Sited on the Classics.

A newspaper correspondent in Washington was chatting with ex Representative Gill of Ohio when the latter said something in an indistinct voice which the correspondent thought was a reference to Charlie Landis, the Indiana congressman.

"Yes," said the correspondent. "Charlie Landis is a very nice fellow. So is his brother, Fred Landis. Speaking of Fred Landis reminds me—"

Mr. Gill interrupted his voice in tones of haughty sarcasm. "I did not say Charlie Landis," he said in key tones. "I said Coriolanus, he who, as the classics tell us, was called from the plow to the helm of state."

The correspondent subsided and slunk abjectly out of the room.

When the correspondent told this story to his colleagues one of them said: "The joke was not on you, but on this haughty man Gill. It was Coriolanus who was called from the plow, not Coriolanus."

"The idea of Gill not knowing that," exclaimed the correspondent indignantly. "And he comes from Ohio too!"

Quoted Scripture at Him.

Milt H. Saul, a well known Washington correspondent, had been hammering in his newspaper a certain congressman whose conception of his public duties did not appeal to him. For some time hardly a week had gone by that Mr. Saul had not taken a shot at his victim. One day Mr. Saul was standing in the corridor of the capitol when the congressman hove in sight and immediately bore down upon him.

Mr. Saul was uncertain whether the congressman intended merely to upbraid or to inflict bodily harm, and he prepared for all emergencies. He stood his ground and cast at the congressman an invulnerable and determined gaze. The latter seized him by the lapel of his coat, bent over and looked him in the eye with a searching stare. Then he said sadly:

"Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?"

Thought Taft an "Easy Mark."

Secretary Taft was hurrying away from the White House after Friday's cabinet meeting when one of the newspaper correspondents pursued him down the steps from the office building and asked him a question relating to the isthmus of Panama.

"Isn't that a matter under the control of the state department?" he asked as he stopped in the middle of the street.

"That may be," agreed his interlocutor, "but I know that it is also a matter in which you are greatly interested and know a good deal about, so I thought I'd ask you instead of Secretary Hay."

"Now, say," exclaimed Mr. Taft, looking sharply at the scribe. "Isn't it a fact that you ask me because you think I'm an easier mark than Secretary Hay?"

BLACK-DRAUGHT STOCK and POULTRY MEDICINE

Stock and poultry have few troubles which are not bowel and liver irregularities. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is a bowel and liver remedy for stock. It puts the organs of digestion in a perfect condition. Prominent American breeders and farmers keep their herds and flocks healthy by giving them an occasional dose of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine in their food. Any stock raiser may buy a 25-cent half-pound air-tight can of this medicine from his dealer and keep his stock in vigorous health for weeks. Dealers generally keep Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine. If you do not, send 25 cents for a sample can to the manufacturers, The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

ROCHESTER, GA., Jan. 30, 1902.
Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is the best I ever tried. Our stock was looking bad when you sent me the medicine and now they are getting so fine. They are looking 20 per cent. better.

JURY DISPLEASED.

Bristol, Tenn., May 11.—It is learned tonight that the jury of inquest today wired Dr. J. Wentz, father of the late Edward Wentz, a protest as regarding his comments on the verdict of the jury, and asking him what he meant by saying that the verdict was probably intended to clear the skirts of the men who murdered his son.

The jury is very much displeased with the remarks credited to Dr. Wentz and will take such steps as may be necessary to vindicate themselves.

A telegram from Wise, Va., this evening states that nothing whatever has been seen of the Wentz will. The will has to go to Wise to be probated. The telegram credits the idea that Wentz ever made a will, but the impression at Big Stone Gap is that there can be no doubt about the existence of a will and that it provide for about $100,000 in stocks and bonds for Miss Cornelia Brookshire, of St. Louis, the young lady who was to marry Wentz.

The will, it is claimed, has no reference to the interest young Wentz had in the the Virginian Coal and iron company of which he was manager. The fact that a will existed has been closely guarded all those months and the attorney for the company have declined to give any information on the subject.

Only Himself to Blame

Von Humboldt once said: "It is my conviction that a man has only himself to blame if his life appears to him at any time void of interest or pleasure." He was an authority for he filled his own life with the greatest and most varied work, the noblest friendships and the highest thought, and 90 years still found him young in spirit. His secret was that he put so much into life, in his energies and affections, that he inevitably received a great deal from it in return, and this method is within any one's reach.

RISKS OF FEATHERED TRIBE

Birds liable to as Many Accidents as Other Creatures.

Of all creatures birds are most exempt from liability to accident, yet they not infrequently lose their lives in most unexpected ways. Once above trees and buildings they have the whole upper air free of every obstacle and though their flight sometimes equals the speed of a railroad train they have little to fear when well above ground. Collision with other birds seems scarcely possible, but it sometimes occurs. When a covey of quail are flushed occasionally two birds will collide, at times meeting with such force that both are stunned. Flycatchers darting at the same insect will know and then come together, but not hard enough to injure either bird. In the English papers a few years ago a rare accident was recorded—a heron had spiked itself on one of the pointed iron arms of a cross surmounting a church steeple. Even the smallest and most wonderful of all fliers, the humming bird, may come to grief in accidental ways, as was recently shown by the case of a tiny bird of the ruby throated variety which became entangled in the hooks of a birdlock bar and died a prisoner before help could free it.

Young plovers sometimes become entangled in the horsehair which are used in the lining of the nest. When they are old enough to fly and attempt to leave they are held prisoners or left dangling from the nest. When milk traps are set in the snow in winter owls frequently fall victims, mice being scarce and the bait tempting.

Lighthouses are perhaps the cause of more accidents to birds than any other obstacle they encounter on their nocturnal migrations north and south. Many hundreds are found dead at the base of such structures. The sudden glare is so confusing and blinding as they shoot from intense darkness into its circle of radiance that they are completely bewildered and dash headlong against the thick panes of glass. Telegraph wires are another menace to low flying birds, especially those which, like quail and woodcock, enjoy a whirlwind and attain great speed within a few yards. Such birds have been found out almost in two by the force with which they struck the wire.

The elements frequently catch birds unawares and overpower them. A sudden wind or storm will drive coast flying birds hundreds of miles out to sea, and oceanic birds may be blown as far inland. Hurricanes in the West Indies are said to cause the deaths of innumerable birds, as well as other creatures. Small islands are known to have become completely depopulated of their feathered inhabitants from such a cause. Violent hailstorms, coming without warning in warm weather, are quite common agents in the destruction of birds, and thousands of English sparrows have been stricken in a city during such a storm.

Ruffed grouse have a habit of burrowing down beneath the snow in winter and letting the storm shut them in. They spend the night in this warm, cozy retreat, their breath making its way out through the loosely packed crystals. But this becomes a fatal trap when a cold rain sets in during the night and an impenetrable crust cuts off their means of escape.—New York Post.

The Crater of Mount Etna.

A writer in Forest and Stream, telling of his view of the crater of Mount Etna, says: "I threw myself flat upon the ground with my head over the rim and took a look down into what the Sicilians call the mouth of hell. A vast column of steam was shooting up into the heavens. This was so impregnated with sulphurous fumes that I was obliged to keep several thicknesses of my shawl over my mouth and nose to prevent strangulation. Occasionally a blast of wind would drive back the steam, allowing me to see far down into this horrid inferno. The crater itself is three miles in circumference. The inner side of the rim was variegated with colors of red, orange and yellow from the sulphur fumes. A million or a Dante could not do justice to the terrible grandeur of the scene. According to the ancient Greeks and Romans, this is the workshop of Vulcan, where he forges his thunderbolts for Jove. I could not see the old fellow, but the rumbling sound I heard far down in those black depths must have been he grumbling at his work."

A CASE OF BLACKMAIL.

Young Mrs. Varian while shopping left her bag containing her purse and two letters, the one recently received, the other to be posted, on the counter. After awhile she came hurriedly back. The salesman, a young man of very unimpressive appearance, whose clothes had been renovated and cleaned to the point of respectability, required by his employers, declined that he had not seen it, when upon Mrs. Varian threatened to send to the office and have him searched.

"If you do you will bring shame upon me and," he hesitated, then cast a piercing glance at the lady, "perhaps yourself."

Mrs. Varian paled. She remembered the letters.

"Indeed," said the salesman in a low tone, "when and where can I see you?"

She cast a withering glance at him, then gave her address, adding: "To-night at 11. Come to the basement. How much shall I leave ready?"

"Two thousand dollars."

The lady's heart sank within her, for she knew she could not raise such a sum. But she went away without further effort to regain her property or to reduce the amount of the blackmail.

About 5 o'clock that afternoon a flashily dressed man stopped at the counter and while examining some silks looked up at the salesman with a surprised expression and asked, "Are you George Perkins?"

"I am."

"I'm Johnny Denico. I come from the same town as you."

Perkins permitted Mr. Denico to claim acquaintance without protest, listening to what evidence he had as to his really being what he represented, his listening without even a yes or no. When Denico concluded, "I'm alone in town; come and have a dinner with me."

Perkins saw something tangible. He hadn't had a good dinner for years, and as Denico was willing to pay for one he was perfectly willing to trust to his professions till it was over. Either the man had made a mistake or he was trying to "do" him. After dinner he would break away.

At 6 o'clock Denico came back, the clerks swarmed out, and the two newly made friends were in the throng. Denico led the way to a restaurant, ordered a good dinner and while they were waiting for it concluded that it would be pleasant to have a private room, which was secured. When Perkins was well filled, Denico began to hint about the bush in a proposition he said he had to make, but at last came out plain:

"To tell the truth, George, this proposition of mine is dependent upon a little game I'm playing. I've got a scheme for getting to people by a very ingenious advertisement, the real meaning of which is thinly concealed. Now I want a man!"

"That's your game, is it?" interrupted Perkins. "I knew from the first by your looks that you were no acquaintance of mine and that you were either going to lunko me or wanted me to join you in some confidence game. Mr. Denico, if that's your name, you've given me a first rate dinner, and on that account I'll not put the police on your track, but I want to tell you that I'm an honest man, working for a first class concern, and can't be tempted."

Perkins drained his glass and, rising, took his hat from a hook. Then turning he said: "Good evening, Mr. Denico. The next time you try to 'do' a man you'd better light on one that can't see through a millstone."

"Sh down," said Denico, with a hard, dangerous manner and tone. Perkins took fright at once and sprang for the door. Before he could open it he felt Denico's hand on his collar and the cold muzzle of a revolver pressed against his neck. Denico led him back to his seat and crammed him into it. Then he looked the door, put the key in his pocket and resumed his seat.

"I've failed to fool you as I hoped. I don't like my present method. It's dangerous, especially in this case. But I won't use that thing, putting the revolver in his pocket. 'This morn' I'll try this." And he drew ten inches of polished steel from his breast pocket, the point of which made Perkins shudder.

"This morn' a body left her bag at your counter. I don't believe you have dared leave it there. I made sure of you from the time you left the store, and I believe you have it on your person."

"I haven't," said Perkins, trembling. "I locked it up in a bundle of silk goods. The wrapper girl found it and sent it to the office."

"With everything in it?"

"Yes."

"You bet. Turn your pockets inside out."

Perkins hesitated a moment, then, realizing that he was cornered, took two dollars from his inside pocket and threw them on the table. Denico seized them eagerly, looking at the addresses, then looked conspicuously stepping to the desk to unlock the door and held it open for Perkins to pass out, holding him with a kick that nearly broke his spine.

The next morning he who had passed under the name of Denico stood with Mrs. Varian in her sitting room before an open log fire.

"Here are my letters," he said. "Why all women without-indifference instead of a very few don't get caught I don't know. The way women carry their belongings would wreck a man every day of his life."

She seized the letters and threw them in the flame.

"That's the end of letter writing," she said. "Hereafter I'll talk what we have to say."

LESTER DILLON. HUMOR OF THE HOUR

A Leap Year License. Several days ago a woman walked into the marriage license office in city hall. She was young and rather pretty, of the ruddy-faced German type. As she advanced toward the desk a clerk rose from his chair.

"What would you like to have?" he asked, with a smile.

"A leap year license," she replied, flushing and looking down demurely.

She gave her name and that of her intended husband, which were entered on the docket.

"How old are you?" asked the clerk.

"Twenty."

"How old is the man?"

"My twenty."

"Have you brought the money by which to set yourself free from the laws of this State?"

"Yes, certainly," she replied, holding forth a five dollar bill.

"Everything done," said the clerk, the license was made out and placed in her hands. As she signed her name on the back of the license, she said:

"It's usual for the man to take out the license. You don't take out your future husband's?"

"Ah, no," she answered quickly. "I didn't want him to do it. You see, I was waiting on in a sudden burst of confidence, the really didn't ask me. I asked him, and she flushed a pink. 'You know, see a ship that's out there, and then their hands and so long an hour, on 1 29 1901. So I don't want an' asked him to do it. Oh, no, he said yes right away and was awful glad. So I don't think I'd do it right now, get the license now."

"Well," she added, as if in justification of her action, looking the surprised look on the clerk's face, "it's a leap year, ain't it?" - Philadelphia Press.
